THE VELTIN SCHOOL

FOR GIRLS . . . . NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

The Veltin School was founded by Mademoiselle Veltin in 1886. It is a day school for girls. The faculty is composed of eminently successful teachers who make a special study of the needs of each pupil and have the ability to apply the proper incentives for the highest attainment. The number of pupils is limited to twelve in each class.

Primary, College Preparatory and General Courses.

Students are admitted at any age and are prepared for admission to Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Barnard, Wellesley and other colleges. The General Course gives opportunity for a wide range of electives, adapted to the ability and taste of the individual. Many lectures are given during the year by university specialists. Sight reading in music and a complete system of physical training are features of the School. Self-government is successfully applied in higher classes.

The School occupies a modern fireproof building erected especially for its use, and located at 160-162 W. 74th Street, and connecting with and including 165 W. 73d Street. It is well lighted, ventilated by fans, heated by steam, and has assembly hall, study rooms, class and recitation rooms, laboratory, studio, and gymnasium with ventilated locker for each student. Senior Hall, connected with the main building by a wide corridor, is devoted to the use of the Senior Department, and has a large reference library and complete appliances for illustrating the various subjects.

The Art Department of The Veltin School is conducted as an independent feature and has attained a wide reputation on account of the excellent facilities presented, and the unusual ability of its instructors.

This Department is located in the same building as the Veltin School, occupying an entire floor of the building, arranged especially for art study. The aim is to awaken the mind of the student to the beauty in nature and art, to stimulate the creative faculty and to train the eye, hand and memory. A complete course has been established in drawing from life, composition, anatomy, painting and sketching; also in wood sculpture and modeling. Students in the Art Department come from all parts of the United States.

WHO'S WHO IN PENNSYLVANIA

A BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF CONTEMPORARIES

EDITED BY JOHN W. LEONARD.

The new (Second) Edition of Who's Who in Pennsylvania, issued four years after the publication of the First, is a complete and up-to-date presentation of personal statistics of those living citizens of the Commonwealth who bear the most active and influential part in the progress and development of the State.

It has been edited with the greatest care and its records are authentic, and the volume is an authoritative reference book of current biography of those citizens of the State who are now at the front of its activities and whose achievements are matters of current interest. The statesmen and jurists, capitalists, railway officials, leaders in commerce and manufactures, lawyers, physicians, the higher clergy, the leaders in the colleges and universities of the State, scientists, journalists, artists, authors, engineers, and others who represent the public, industrial, intellectual and social interests of Pennsylvania are included, in due proportion, in this volume.

As a reference book the publication will be found of constant use to those interested in the Commonwealth and its citizens, whether resident within the State or elsewhere, and it will form a valued addition to the list of most frequently consulted authorities in libraries, public or private.

The appended addresses form a most valuable addition to the volume as a work of reference.

The book is neatly bound in green cloth, and contains 600 pages, and the price is Five Dollars.

THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

By H. C. GAUSS

The author of this book, H. C. Gauss, Esq., is a trained journalist at present occupying the responsible position of Private Secretary to Attorney General Bonaparte.

The book not only gives a list of all offices of sufficient importance to be filled by Presidential appointment and subject to confirmation by the Senate, but a complete statement of the powers and duties pertaining to each office and the salary attached thereto. How many Americans are there who could tell precisely what the powers and responsibilities of the United States District Attorney or the Collector of the Port are, and the extent of power vested in the hands of Bank Examiners and the Comptroller of the Currency, and to what work of reference could they turn for full information upon these subjects?

This book contains information upon points of law, procedure and custom not known to many of even the best informed citizens. Not many know that the terms of the Postmaster General and the Comptroller of the Currency extend a month beyond the term of the President who appointed them, and that the Postmaster General, unlike other Cabinet officers, can be removed by the President only with the consent of the Senate. Few know that United States Senators and Representatives have a right to select, subject to the passing of examinations, cadets in the Naval Academy, but have no such right with reference to the Military Academy, for which their selections are merely advisory, the President having the sole power of appointment. These and many hundreds of other facts as little familiar are brought out in this useful volume.

What American traveling abroad or contemplating going abroad but would gladly know the duties and powers of the American Ambassador and Minister, the Consul General and the American Consul; what their duties are not only to the Government they represent, but to American citizens who visit the countries to which they are accredited as well. Not long since a famous New Yorker lost a suit in the United States Circuit Court involving more than $100,000. He desired to appeal it to the Supreme Court of the United States, but was astounded at being told by his lawyers that they were not sure that he could appeal it, and to his astonishment the Supreme Court refused to hear the case. Now this book tells just what cases can be heard in United States Courts and the jurisdiction of each court; and also covers all points likely to come up about the Government and its officials in all their relations at home and abroad.

The American Government is a volume of nine hundred pages, bound in half morocco, and the price is $5. It is a book of reference for American citizens and for foreigners who desire full and authentic information as to the organization of the United States Government.

PREFACE.

The Fourth Biennial Edition of WHO'S WHO IN NEW YORK CITY AND STATE is here presented with confidence that it will meet with a welcome even more wide and generous than that accorded to its predecessor of 1907. The processes of addition and elimination have both been invoked to give to the present volume a more thoroughly representative character. As a work of reference for biographical statistics of a single State it is unique in its comprehensive completeness. While it is possible to criticise any compilation of the kind on the ground that certain individuals are included or excluded, it is believed that this book is less open to criticism of this kind than any other of its class. In inclusiveness it goes far beyond any other publication, so far as New Yorkers are concerned, containing about 300 per cent. more sketches of living citizens and residents of the Empire State than any other.

The book is in this edition an entirely new one, only a small percentage of the sketches from the previous edition appearing without change or addition. Great care has been exerted to make the sketches accurate and dependable. The information in almost every instance has been procured at first hands, and by submission of proofs for correction, errors have been, to the largest possible extent, avoided.

WHO'S WHO IN NEW YORK CITY AND STATE has become recognized as one of the most requisite items in reference and home libraries. It presents the life stories, in condensed form, of the thousands of citizens of the State who are now at the front of its activities, and whose achievements are matters of current interest. The statesmen and jurists, the financiers, capitalists and captains of industry, the leaders in commerce and manufactures, the lawyers, physicians and clergymen, the philosophers and philanthropists, the scientists, educators and intellectual leaders, the journalists, authors and litterateurs, the artists and architects, the engineers and inventors, in brief, those people who in every branch of worthy activity are in the best sense representative, both in City and State, are here in due proportion.

Omissions there are, of course. There are some from whom or about whom no data could be procured; and perhaps some have been overlooked. It may be stated with confidence, however, that few, if any, glaring omissions will be found. Some may have been included who would better have been omitted. Such cases, among many thousands of subjects, are unavoidable, but, looked at in bulk, it is safe to assert that the book is open to little criticism as to its subjects.

It is essentially a reference book, compiled upon honest lines. No one has been included or excluded merely on the ground of willingness or unwillingness to purchase the book. It is the only complete reference book of current biography of the people of New York City and State. As a book occupying that field without a serious competitor, it has fully arrived. It is used by libraries, by writers, by newspapers, and by business offices in all the ways in which such a publication can be utilized. Its data form the daily source of biographical reference in the press and home and abroad. It is constantly quoted in the editorials of the leading newspapers, and for all purposes, from casual reference to complete biography or obituary, its resources are constantly drawn upon.

In the home circle it is a valuable auxiliary to conversation or to study. It puts the individual en rapport with the antecedents and careers of the notables of the State, and to all, from the most intellectual to the everyday man and woman of business or leisure, it is a source of useful information which is not to be found elsewhere.

A large advance subscription and an active daily demand assure the success of this edition. The next one, to be issued two years hence, will deal with equal or greater completeness with the New Yorkers of that date. Readers who can and will suggest names omitted which should be included will confer a favor on the publishers by sending such names with the appropriate addresses.

A few biographies received too late for insertion in the proper alphabetical place, will be found in the Addenda at the end of the volume.
